Periodontal Disease Treatment

Most older pets receiving dental cleaning have already some degree of periodontal disease. If periodontal disease is present, additional procedures may be needed for best treatment.

Treatment of periodontal disease may require the treatment of "pockets" in infected areas of the gums, or if further advanced, extraction of a tooth/teeth. Cost of treatment for periodontal "pockets", which in most cases is necessary to help retard progression of disease, is $55.65 per pocket. This includes root cleaning of the diseased site and application of an antibiotic gel that hardens to protect and heal the diseased area. Extractions of badly diseased teeth, if needed, ranges from $17.00- $169.00 per tooth, depending on time required for extraction. If dental radiographs are needed, the charge is $30.00 per area.

I wish my pet to receive ANY needed treatment for periodontal disease, if present.
